DANCE AT CADILLAC HALL.

Automobile Novelty Affair Well Attended and Feature Pleased.

The Waltz and Two Step club, whose members are E. H. Rogers, Julian L. Barrow, scored a big hit at Cadillac hall on Friday evening with an automobile novelty dance which was attended by nearly 100 couples and a feature event of the evening was introduced for the grand march at the middle of the program.

At that time the fancy paper automobile bonnets were distributed to all the ladies and lollipops to the men, while the grand march was given by Miss Louise Kiehl and Miss Nellie Thompson, who were immediately preceded by a honking automobile for which Charles Miller was chauffeur in regulation goggles and costume.

After several circuits of the hall the lights were all extinguished but one or two, when the auto blew up in a realistic manner, the chauffeur was tossed out, bringing out enthusiastic applause for the successful culmination of the evening's feature. The Cadillac orchestra played for the dance programme.

OBITUARY.

Miss Frances A. Marsh.

At six o'clock Friday morning after a prolonged and distressing illness, Miss Frances A. Marsh passed away at her home on Sachem terrace at the age of 83 years. Miss Marsh, though not a native of Norwich, had resided here for almost 30 years and had endeared herself to a wide circle of friends.

She came of a line of distinguished ancestors; the daughter of Rev. Dr. John Marsh, an eminent preacher and leader of temperance and moral forces of the generation.

Her mother, a Talmadge, was one of the best New England families, from whom she inherited the noblest ideals and traditions of moral and social worth. She was a Christian woman from early life of definite religious convictions, a devoted wife and a Christian worker of rare and sustained enthusiasm.

During her long residence in Brooklyn she was identified with the Episcopal church (Dr. Storrs) and was for many years at the head of the infant department of its large Sunday school.

She was to Norwich one of a trio of sisters, whose high character and stately dignity deeply impressed all who came into intimate association with them, her own.

Identified herself with the Park Congregational church, to which she brought an ardent and unflinching zeal. She was in deep sympathy with all good things and good people, and though for several years incapacitated for outward forms of activity, her interest never wavered.

We recall her years of strength and vigor and sympathy with all good measures, her kind and cheerful personality, which will be long and affectionately remembered.

She is survived by a brother, Eben Marsh of New York, and a nephew, Charles Marsh of New York.

Miss Mary E. Gleason.

The death of Miss Mary Elizabeth Gleason occurred at the home of her cousin, Mrs. William J. McKnight, No. 6 Robinson street, on Friday afternoon, after a long illness. She had been ill for a year or more and was never in robust health, though she bore her illness with patience and without complaint. She passed peacefully away with her relatives at her bedside.

Miss Gleason was born in this city Oct. 17, 1887, the daughter of Jeremiah and the late Mary A. Fogarty Gleason. Ten years of her life were spent in Greenville, where for a time she worked in the bleachery. For the past sixteen years she has lived with her mother in this city.

She was a quiet and unassuming disposition and always a home body, but made many lasting friendships by a kind way, high ideals and bright and optimistic manner. She was a member of the Halle church, where she made many friends. Three years of her life were spent with her relatives. Her mother passed away nineteen years ago.

She is survived by her sister, two brothers, William F. and John Francis Gleason of this city, four aunts, Mrs. A. Sheridan, Mrs. John Cost, Mrs. F. Gleason of New London, and Miss Fannie Gleason of Washington, D. C., and an uncle, John F. Gleason, of Lawrence, Mass.

TELLS OF HIS TRIP TO PANAMA

Charles H. Brown Describes the Work on the Big Canal the Distance Being the Same as from New London to Putnam—Gives Statistics and Shows Drawings of the Big Cut.

Before the Colonial club on Friday evening Charles H. Brown, who made a trip through the Panama canal region about a year ago, gave an illustrated talk about the canal which, full of information and the subject, was received with hearty appreciation by the club members. Mr. Brown illustrated his talk with original drawings showing quite clearly the topography of the country and how the canal work is conducted, and was accorded a hearty vote of thanks at the conclusion of the talk.

How It Would Look in Connecticut.

To bring some of the canal details down to an intimate and understandable relation with his audience, Mr. Brown drew an enlightening parallel between the canal measurements and some well known territory in this neighborhood. Its total length of 50 miles from deep water at Colon on the north of the isthmus to deep water on the Panama side would correspond, he said, to the distance from New London to Putnam, measuring up the Thames valley. The present canal is built to the first section of the canal, seven miles of sea water level. Corresponding to the distance from the Thames to the point in the Connecticut river where the Gatun dam and locks is a stretch of 24 miles in the canal through the isthmus. The Panama canal would extend from Allen's Point to Plainfield and would submerge Norwich and the town of Plainfield. The canal would represent the nine miles of the Connecticut river from the town of Plainfield to the town of Putnam, a sea level section.

Antiquity of the Idea.

At the opening of his description Mr. Brown told of the antiquity of the idea of a canal across the isthmus, dating back to one of Balboa's men in 1492. The idea was to pass through a saddle in the mountains, which is the part known as the famous Culebra cut, and is the lowest point in the transcontinental divide, at this point being a little over 300 feet above tide water. The state of Panama is the narrowest part of the isthmus, and among some of its characteristics are the great number of short rapid rivers, of which there are 450, two of which carry 30 million tons of traffic per year, double the capacity of the Suez canal.

Heavy Rains and High Rivers.

The torrential rains of that region were referred to, and the sudden rising of the rivers in consequence, the Chagres river often rising from a depth of three or four feet to 40 feet in 24 hours. Speaking again of the locks in the canal, he told of their location at Gatun, Mira Flores, and Pedro Miguel. The Gatun locks are built in pairs 100 feet wide each and can be filled in from eight to fifteen minutes. The canal will carry 100 vessels each day, 60 going each way, and will carry 30 million tons of traffic per year, double the capacity of the Suez canal.
